

UNEMPLOYED TROOPS WORK WITH STARS

Lights, camera

..action heroes

Mean beret...
Richard keeps a tight hold of actor Danny

Top guns... soldiers train Danny

We aim to help... Ed with star

ROYAL Marine Richard Harley has actor Danny Dyer in a head lock — for a new movie.

The sergeant is training the film's stars with the aid of ex-soldiers hired through The Sun's Jobs for Heroes campaign.

More than 30 former troops have landed work helping on Second World War flick Age of Heroes after we teamed up with expert recruiters ForceSelect.

By DAVID WILLETTS

Danny, 32, said: "Jobs for Heroes is amazing. I will play a commando but these boys are the real deal."

He added of the training at Cobham Hall, Kent: "It has given me a real incentive to push myself because I know how much it means to these boys." Among the ex-soldiers to be given work is Ed Lloyd Owen, a former captain with the 9/12th Royal Lancers. Age of Heroes, to be released next year, tells how 30 Commando Assault Unit went behind enemy lines to wreak havoc with Hitler's war machine.

James Bond baddie Sean Bean is also among the cast.

d.willetts@the-sun.co.uk

Ex-servicepeople seeking work can visit forceselect.com
Firms with job offers should email info@forceselect.com